Reflections Of A Sophomore ...

by Doug Kutilek

Ah, August in Wichita. Usually hot, usually dry. And usually filled with anticipation, at least it was for me in 1967. Done with Hadley Junior High the previous May, and glad of it, and looking forward to the big step up to high school. But not without some apprehension. Sure, I'd heard for years about West High--a sister graduated with the class of 1967 (the class that never saw West lose at football over three seasons) and a brother was a year ahead of me in the class of 1969 (I suspect the red flags went up, not without cause, when the school administrators saw my name among the incoming sophomores--"Oh, no! Another Kutilek!"). I'd been in the building a few times for plays and The Frontier Frolics. But now I was to be a student, lost in the crush of the student body not much short of 2,000 in a building designed for hundreds less.

There would be familiar faces in the sea of students -- in my own class, in OUR class, a number I had known since grade school (some even from first grade) and more from junior high, but these were only a fraction of the whole. There were lots and lots of other new sophomores, from Mayberry, Allison, Hamilton, besides new move-ins. And then there were the upperclassmen. Of course, I knew my brother's friends in the Junior Class, and they knew me, and considered this sufficient grounds to torment me (think Eddie Haskell and Beaver Cleaver). And then there were the Seniors--the studs, the BMOC, guys with letter jackets and brass dripping off them, and some really scary hoods who seemed as if they'd rip your head off if you dared look at them; cheerleaders, other cool and popular girls ... all these people, you know the kind, that got to stand by the windows in D Hall between classes, who considered you the scum of the earth, the dregs of the world because you were only a dorky sophomore. All very intimidating.

All summer, I'd worked at nearby Lawrence Stadium, employed in concessions filling the trays of the walking vendors with sno-cones, cold drinks and popcorn, and was happy when it was time to hang up my work apron. Sometime after the middle of August was the day, particularly the afternoon, when I'd get my first introduction, as a student, to the inside of West High.

School wasn't to start for another couple weeks or so, but it time to begin football practice. So we, the aspiring and perspiring in-coming athlete wanna-be's, showed up at the appropriate outside door at the appointed hour and were let in by the sophomore football coaches, chief among them Coach Sanger, and were issued the left-overs of the school's trove of football equip--shoulder pads, pants, helmets all well-used and not necessarily well-washed, many still smelling of hot and sweaty practices of prior Autumns. The air smelled of chlorine from the nearby swimming pool and I distinctly recall hearing a radio (tuned, of course, to KLEO 1480) with the Rascals singing "How Can I Be Sure?"

Thirty-eight years ago this August, yet it seems more real and clear and close than much that has transpired since then.

This August 5th & 6th, plan on spending some time with other West '70 classmates and recall those simpler and more innocent days.
